COUNTRESS SUBJECTED TO VERY CRUEL SLIGHT

Former American Woman Precluded From Taking Part in Court Festivities.

By LA MARQUESE DE FORTENOV.

BELIN will see but little of the Countess Anton Sigray, who has lately been subjected to a particularly cruel slight, through no fault of the Emperor or Empress. It is a slight all the more regrettable, since of the American women who have married foreigners of title, there has assuredly been none more fitted to adorn a monarchical court than the former Miss Harriet Day, of New York, who by her good looks, her elegance, her particular charm of manner, and her great wealth.

When her sister, Mrs. James W. Gerard, took up her residence at Berlin, an American ambassador, the Sigrays arranged to spend the season in the Prussian capital, so as to see as much of her and of the United States ambassador as possible, and until the other day the two sisters were continually in one another's company.

When, however, arrangements were made for the "Dellier Court," or first state function of the winter, which inaugurates at the Royal Palace the long series of court festivities, and at which all the official presentations are made to the Kaiser and to his consort, it was quietly pointed out to Mrs. Gerard that her sister, the Countess Sigray, could not be included among the American presentations, or, in other words, that she was not to be in the party of fair Americans, consisting of Mrs. Norman de B. Whitehouse and Mrs. Ernest Wilkes of New York, who were to make their courtesy to the Emperor and Empress at the court held last Monday week.

The Countess, it was said, had by her marriage, ceased to be an American, and had become an Austro-Hungarian subject, and could, therefore, by the rules of the court of Berlin and by arrangements concluded between the latter and the court of Vienna, be presented by no one except by the Austrian ambassador at Berlin.

Now the Austrian ambassador there is bound down by hard and fast regulations, to present no one at the court of Emperor William who has not been previously presented at the court of Emperor Francis Joseph. As Countess Sigray had not enjoyed this distinction, she was in consequence precluded from taking part in any of the festivities at the court of Berlin this season, and instead of spending the remainder of the winter at Berlin with her sister, left on the evening before the Dellier Court for London, where she has been since quite ill.

I understand that the Empress, as a mark of special consideration to Ambassador Gerard, received her sister, with her privately, and was particularly gracious. But she could not receive her officially at court, except by means of presentation by the Austrian ambassador.

Now, if Countess Sigray has not yet been presented at the court of Francis Joseph, it is because by her marriage she lost her American nationality, became a subject, and as such certain hereditary qualifications for presentation at his court. No woman who is Austro-Hungarian by birth or by marriage can be presented at the court of Francis Joseph who cannot show several generations of exclusively noble ancestry on both the father's and the mother's side of her house.

As no American woman, married to any Austro-Hungarian noble, can satisfy these requirements, she is, in fact, barred from court at Vienna, even though she may have been presented there prior to her marriage as a distinguished American.

Countess Sigray's fate is that of every American woman married to a noble owing allegiance to Emperor Francis Joseph. That is why I always advise American women to think twice before marrying nobles of this nationality. They are the most charming men of the world, with most agreeable manners, but the position of their foreign-born wives is intolerable to a high-spirited American woman.

The Almanach de Gotha is so rarely in error that when it does make a mistake, it is worthy of being noticed. The issue of 1913 contained an intimation to the effect that Princess Nadjib of Turkey, niece of the reigning Sultan and of ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid, had been married on May 15, 1911, to Enver Bey. Last summer I pointed out in these letters that this was a mistake, that no marriage between the two had taken place, that it was only the betrothal that had occurred in May, 1911, and that Enver Bey, moreover, displayed a considerable amount of reluctance to fix the wedding day, and to enter into the bonds of actual matrimony. The issue of the Almanach de Gotha for 1914, which has just appeared, records the name of Princess Nadjib of Turkey as still unmarried, and omits all mention of Enver Bey, or of any alleged marriage between them.

The position of a damsel, as the pashas and beys are styled who have married princesses of the imperial family, has always been regarded at Constantinople with a good deal of contempt. Moreover, these damsels are subjected to so many restrictions that their role is not one to tempt so ambitious a man as Enver, and it is doubtful whether his marriage with the princess will ever take place.

His nomination to the post of Minister of War at Constantinople, with the rank of pasha, that is to say, of general, and his subsequent ministerial order, appointing himself also chief of the general staff of the army, have given great offence in Russia, and have contributed to still further strain the relations between the Muscovite empire and the Porte. For when Enver was military attaché of the Ottoman embassy at Berlin, he on several occasions delivered himself in print, of such violent attacks upon Russia and upon the Russian army, that they had to be repudiated by the Turkish ambassador, and officially disavowed by the Kaiser's court and government. Until ultimately silenced by the latter, he was wont to expatiate on the advantage of Turkey's attacking Russia in Asia Minor, and upon the prospects of defeating the Czar's troops massed on that particular portion of the border.

Then, too, Russia holds Enver Pasha mainly responsible for the appointment last month of General Liman von Sanders, of the German army, head of the German military mission to Turkey, to the command of the First Ottoman Army Corps, as well as of the entire military district of Constantinople and of the defenses of the Straits of the Dardanelles. Russia, backed in the matter by France, and in a lesser degree by Great Britain, protested against this appointment with so much vigor that it had to be rescinded. For Russia insisted that the entire neutrality of Constantinople and of the Dardanelles, as far as the foreign powers were concerned, would be destroyed if the Turkish metropolis and the defenses of the straits were placed under the immediate command and control of one of the ablest of the Kaiser's generals.

Enver Pasha declined at first to cancel the appointment, and the Porte showed a greater amount of independence to Russia than at any time since the war of 1877. If the Porte ultimately gave way, it was due to the Kaiser, who wished to avoid any serious trouble with Russia at this juncture.

Emperor William, however, evened matters up by promoting Liman von Sanders from the rank of Lieutenant-general to that of full general in the German army, and as the agreement between Constantinople and Berlin provides that the officers of the German military mission in Turkey shall always have one grade higher in the Ottoman army than in their own, the Sultan has had to promote General Liman von Sanders to the rank of field marshal, while Enver Pasha has appointed him inspector-general of the entire Ottoman army.

Enver Pasha, although now at the head of the Ottoman army, has yet to prove his capacity as a great commander. For the only feats thus far to his credit have been as a successful leader of military demonstrations, while his hands are stained with the blood of that fine old veteran, General Mazin Pasha, who was shot down in cold blood while Minister of War at Constantinople.

Run Over by Train.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Christiansburg, Va., January 31.—Elmer Jordan, a colored boy about twelve years of age, while attempting to board a moving freight train on the Southern Railroad, here to-day, was thrown under the wheels of the engine, passing over him, crushing one leg, and fatally injuring him. The boy was sent to Roanoke hospital for treatment.

Post-Office Is Transferred.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Arlington, Va., January 31.—The postmaster of this city was to-day formally turned over to the new postmaster, Dr. William M. Smith, who was recently appointed postmaster by President Wilson. J. Armstrong Egerton, the retiring postmaster, completed the work incident to the transfer late to-day.

Dr. Smith is a member of the State Board of Health and also president of the local board of school trustees.

Mr. Egerton was appointed postmaster of this city March 19, 1910, by President Taft, he succeeding Postmaster Thomas Burroughs.

NEW RAILWAY LINE.

Rich. Undeveloped Counties in the Two
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Washington, January 31.—Representative Montague introduced a bill in the House to-day authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver to the city of Richmond, one bronze cannon or field piece. Mr. Montague stated that the cannon, when secured, will be placed at a point on Monument Avenue to mark one of the remnants of the old fortifications of the city, soon to be demolished.

News of Gloucester.

Gloucester, Va., January 31.—The Board of Supervisors held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, all members being present. Besides the routine business, the question of rental of the storehouse at Gloucester Point was up for discussion. The board, having rented the store for $200 a year without advertising for bids, was offered $225 a year, and could get more. The old contract will stand unless some one takes the case before the Circuit Court. W. A. Rowe, who is agent at Gloucester Point, was before the board and asked for $30 a month additional in order that he might hire more help. Mr. Rowe reported business greatly increased since the Chesapeake Steamship Company put on a daily boat service. Last year the wharf handled 12,000 barrels of potatoes, while the estimate for this year is 20,000 barrels, and other commodities are increasing in proportion. The hours at the wharf are from 3:30 A. M. to 10 P. M. and Mr. Rowe was given the extra $30.

Representative J. N. Stubbs has offered a bill in the lower House authorizing the Charity school board to sell the poorhouse farm.

Postmaster-Elect R. M. Janney has appointed Nellie Reade as his deputy.

Mr. Janney has sent in his bond and expects to take charge of the office in about ten days.

What Use Is Money If Your Health Is Poor—You Do Not Enjoy It or Anything It Will Buy.

Stop suffering and trying to hoard up your money (again, stop throwing your money away). How? You ask. Why, by buying a lot of so-called cures because they are cheap. You know you are only wasting your time as well as your money.

If you suffer from rheumatism, catarrh, liver, kidney or stomach troubles, indigestion or worms of any kind, call at Tragle's drug store and let him explain the real curative virtues of the Quaker Herb Remedies. Get a bottle of Oil of Balm, the external application. This will give you from thirty to thirty-six days' treatment (notice after a few days the remarkable relief); the improvement in your condition in less than a week will no surprise you that you will begin praising the day you accepted this advice.

When you spend your money for the Quaker Remedies you know you are getting God's own gifts to sufferers (the herbs, roots, berries and barks grown for man's use). There are no chemicals or mineral poisons in the formula; harmless to give to a babe.

Here is a report from Mr. C. J. B. Hamm, 611 Pearl Street, Petersburg, Va. He had been afflicted for five years with chronic constipation, so bad that his blood became poisoned. He had itching and breaking out all over his body; had irregular appetite and was in a weak, run-down condition; things he ate caused distress, and bloating was a common occurrence.

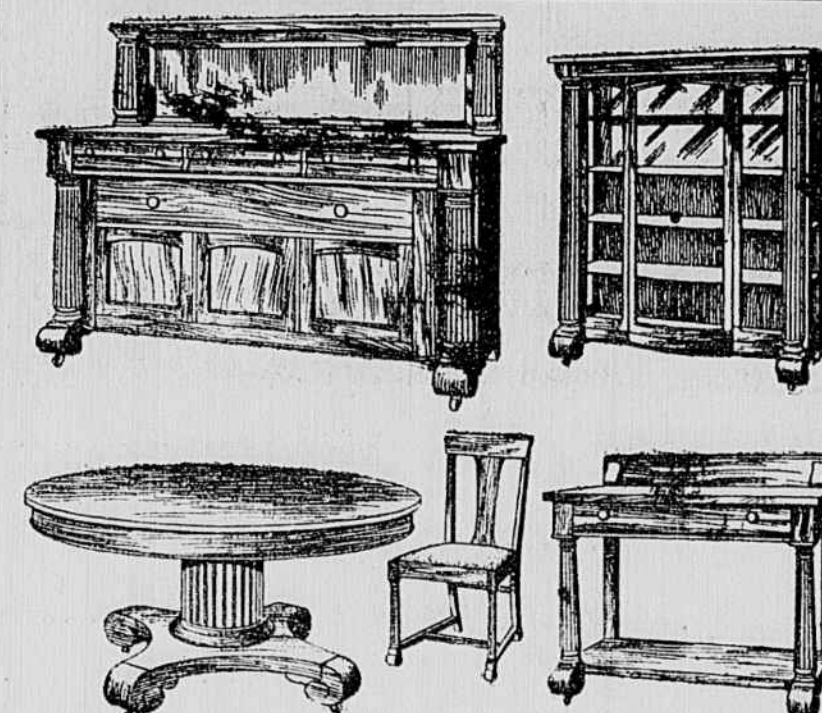

He tried a dozen different so-called indigestion cures without even getting relief. After reading of Quaker Herb Extract he went to the drug store and started a treatment of the remedies.

After using two bottles of Extract, he reports himself entirely cured; also, said his father had rheumatism in his arms and shoulders so bad that he could not raise his hand. After taking one bottle of Quaker Herb Extract and using one bottle of Oil of Balm he can use his arm freely, and says: "We can't praise the Quaker Remedies enough for what they have done for us," and advises all who suffer to try the Quaker Remedies. Call to-day and obtain Quaker Herb Extract—six bottles for $5.00, three for $2.50, or $1.00 a bottle. Oil of Balm, 50c a Tragle's drug store, 817 East Broad Street.—Advertisement.

Perfectly Matched Handsome Dining Room Suits

The charm of quality is nowhere more evident than in the furnishing of the dining-room. The number of persons who are buying better goods indicates the general tendency to bestow more careful thought upon the selection of designs that are distinctive and pleasing. The Furniture should be graceful in its lines, symmetrical in its proportions, expressing that sturdiness of quality that characterizes most American homes. We have been on the quality side of the Furniture business long enough to know it and to advise you.

We are showing some of the Handsomest Dining-Room Furniture that has been seen in Richmond, perhaps in this country—Buffet, China Case, Serving Table, Dining Table, Chairs—all to match perfectly in Solid Mahogany, Crotch Mahogany, Circassian Walnut, Quartered Oak, in types representing the Jacobean, William and Mary, Colonial and other periods, and in reproductions of such masters as Chippendale, Sheraton, Adam Bros., and our own best American workers. Come and look.

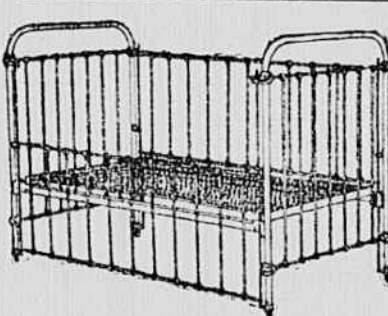

Our Rug Department

Is offering an exhibit of beautiful floor coverings that should prove especially attractive to the careful housekeeper. The economy and convenience of buying floor coverings from this store is being proven daily by the increase of patronage given us. Our record for quality in furniture is behind the quality of our Rugs. We know how to harmonize Rugs and Furniture. See this department on our spacious second floor.

Beautiful Oriental Rugs, in choice specially selected and exclusive designs. Every variety of color in Kazak, Moussoul, Shirvan, Cabistan, Belochistan, Bokahra, Iran, Ferrighan.
